

Temporary auditoria for universities and other educational institutions

Increasing school capacity With temporary auditoria

After the COVID-19 outbreak, almost all universities and other educational institutions have been mandated to close their doors for the remainder of the academic year, leaving them with a big challenge: to catch up after losing an entire semester, while still welcoming a new year of students.

We offer schools a way to quickly expand their capacity during this peak in student attendance, by building temporary auditoria. The added capacity would allow you to host extra lessons and lectures, in order for students to catch up on their classes and work.

Our temporary lecture halls also provide universities with the space needed to allow for social distancing during lectures. By increasing capacity, students can sit further apart, which can help in preventing a new outbreak, while the virus is still active and a vaccine is being created.

The temporary auditoria delivered by us can be tailor made to best fit your campus as well as your needs. After installation, they can be scaled up and down easily, to continuously match your space requirements.

We are ready to help you make the most of next semester. Please contact us, we can help.
